

Write the answer for your Big question and three inquiry questions.

	Question	Answer
Big question	How does the successful growth of a company influence company decisions and the economic systems?	When a company has a smooth journey and successful growth, it will influence the economic system they are in a little. For example, if this company is in a market system, other similar companies will become unpopular and eventually bankrupt. They would have to separate most of their wealth from the other companies and common people if they were in a controlled economic system.
Factual	Why do companies get influenced by the economic system?	For a company to be successful and thrive, its economic system matters a lot. Different systems have different rules and different rules mean different strategies the company had to come up with to thrive. If a shoe company sells bad quality shoes for a low price in a market system, this strategy might not work for a controlled economy, the government might stop you from selling these cheap shoes.
Conceptual	Why does the growth of a single company influence the company's decisions, the market, and the whole economic system?	If this company were in a market economy, it would make other similar companies go bankrupt, and ultimately lead to their deaths. So for the other companies to stay alive, they must see what that successful company is not doing, and find their faults, or copy their decisions to try and catch up with them. If that company was in a command economy, the different companies would not have to worry since the government would come and sort it out by either funding them more or depriving some money from the successful company and giving it to the unsuccessful company to keep everything steady and equal.
Debatable	Are a company's decisions the most important part of successful growth?	Yes. If you went slightly off the path, you would reach a dead end, and keeping a straight and directed growth needs great decisions made by wise and experienced people in that company.

What did you learn from Unit 2?

I learned about <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Different economic systems <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Market economy system • Command economy system • Mixed economy system • Traditional economy system - The different places that use these systems <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Market economy system - America, Canada, UK, Germany, etc... • Command economy system - Cuba, North Korea, etc.. • Mixed economy system - China, Norway, Singapore, Vietnam, etc...

- Traditional economy system - Bhutan and Haiti, and a lot of rural places.
- Benefits and disadvantages of each system
- Different factors of production

What is the thing that you are most proud of in this unit? What went well?

I think the ad for my group's company was my masterpiece. It expressed how our company was the best as well as how our beloved clientele loved my company. I also did it entirely myself and I think I did it very well since everybody likes it. It is both amusing to watch and also explains my message clearly.

Compared with Unit 1, what skills did you improve? Why do you think so?

Working as an individual. Back in unit one, I did everything with my team, but my team for this unit wasn't the best. Ding helped me but the other team members didn't do anything. But this was a perfect scenario to work on my individual skills like critical thinking, decision-making, time and self-management, and completing tasks by myself. In the future, not all my projects will be with a group, and I need to develop this skill to not rely on others too much.

How did you do well with the 4 Aoba Criteria? Choose one criterion below and explain it in detail.

- Creative and Critical Thinking is analyzing and evaluating something to come to an informed judgment.
- The learning process involves a range of strategies to discover or create a solution to a challenge or gain a new understanding of something.
- Teamwork is essentially working together towards a common or related goal.
- Communication is the process of listening, writing, speaking, or other means to share information.

Creative and Critical Thinking- I had to make some great decisions during this unit and had to creatively express our company while also critically telling people that our company is better than every other similar company. The way I did this was by an ad, I thought I could airdrop this ad to everyone but I think it's too annoying so I didn't. But I asked a lot of people what they thought about the video, and a lot of people replied that; it's great, they would watch it, and that they understand exactly what I am expressing. So I think I achieved my goal both critically and creatively.

Which ATL skills did you develop in this unit? Which ATL skills do you want to develop next time?

Social skills. I wasn't able to use much of this skill in this unit since half of my team was hiding in the toilet with their phones most of the time. From the feedback from some teachers, they said that my social skills are pretty good. However I wasn't able to get half of my team to focus so in my opinion, I still have a lot to learn before I truly master this skill. I just hope that in the next unit, no matter how hard my team is, I can still be a leader and use this skill to help everyone learn!
